

If-chain (conditionals II)

If I were rich	I'd give her a call and invite her to the party.
If my father was a millionaire	I'd explain it to you.
If my family lived in the country	we'd study more and know more vocabulary.
If you did more sports	I wouldn't have to worry about my weight.
If the movie weren't on so late	I would call her more often.

If I had more time	I'd buy a villa in the south of France.
If we had a stricter English teacher	it would snow rather than rain.
If I didn't eat so much chocolate	I would have to get up earlier in order to go to school/work.
If the weather was a bit better	I'd come to your party.
If I knew her phone number	I'd certainly buy one and get rid of my old PC.

If I knew how to solve this equation	I'd go to the movies and the theater more regularly.
If it was a bit colder	he would buy me a Rolls Royce and a penthouse for my 18 th birthday.
If my mother didn't complain so much	you'd be a lot fitter and have a better condition.
If I didn't have to study for my math test	I'd certainly watch it.
If Apple computer's didn't cost so much	we could at least take the children for a walk.
