

Annual Award Ceremony at Nate's School

For the annual award ceremony Nate's school is looking for the most outstanding students in different categories. In your group discuss who should win the following prizes. Find good arguments and list some of the things these students have done in order to deserve the prizes.

Remember: Use the present perfect tense to talk about general experiences/behaviors and things your characters have done several/many times.

If you want to give specific examples and describe these events in detail use the past simple.

Type of award	General behaviors: What has this student done to deserve the prize?
Most obnoxious student	has...
Most daring student	has...
Most charming student	has...
Most intelligent student	has...
Most admirable student	has...
Funniest student	has...
Stupidest student	has...

Present your ideas to the class. Who will win the contest?

Writing:

Write a letter to the school's principal where you suggest winners for four to five of the awards. Describe what they have done to deserve the prizes. Write at least three sentences for each one.

Start your letter like this:

Dear Mr.,

We have been asked to suggest names for this year's school awards. I have observed many extraordinary things this year and would like to suggest the following students for this year's awards:

...

I am sure all these students deserve to be awarded for their extraordinary behavior. They have made school life more interesting and colorful.

Yours,

xy
